Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies

BULLETIN No. 65

RED DEER RIVER FOR 1942

So far as possible in planning the route of the annual cross country Trail Ride, our Trail Committee tries to alternate between North and South of the Canadian Pacific Railway line. The route selected for this coming Summer is North of that line, starting from Banff to join the horses at Cascade River, and going over Snow Creek Pass to the Red Deer River, returning by way of Baker Lake and Ptarmigan Lake to Lake Louise, where the Pow Wow will be held. This route follows a trail which we have already traversed (in 1935), but it will be less of a strain on the first day, as the Parks Branch has extended the road up Cascade River towards Windy Camp, and this, as a special privilege, will be available to the conveyance which we hope will be available for our party to the corral where the horses will be in waiting.

The dates selected for the Trail Ride are Friday, July 24th, to Tuesday, July 28th, and the rates will be the same as last year, namely, $50.00, including bus transportation and gratuities to guides. This decision to keep the rate the same as before is in spite of the considerable expense we find ourselves faced with on account of tent equipment. The Pow Wow is planned for Lake Louise.

So far as we know, there will be no rationing of horses' hoofs, and there is no finer exercise than trail riding, so tell your friends to come along and come yourself if you can.

Printed in Canada, January, 1942.

President Travers Coleman, no longer a dude.

OUR PRESIDENT ON OUR TRAIL

On looking over our file of Bulletins we came across the account, written by our President while he was still a greenhorn, of the Trail Ride of 1935 which follows the route we are planning to take in 1942. Our President may have changed, but the scenery remains the same, as one year in the life of a human being is about the same as seven thousand years in the life of a Rocky Mountain Pass. With his permission, therefore, we are reprinting some extracts from Travers Coleman's earlier article, as this gives such an excellent picture of the trail:

"All the first morning the trail wound up through tall trees along the valley of the Cascade River with the Palliser Range off to the right and the Sawback range to the left. Glints of sunlight filtered through, but mainly it was a cool, tree-shrouded trail fording and re-fording innumerable little streams.

"The shadows were getting deeper when we came out from the tress to see teepee poles of Windy Camp looming up on the starboard beam. Smoke issued from the rickety stovepipe of the cook tent; wranglers were busy bringing firewood and all about was a scenery of sheery bustle. It was the shank of the evening and very quiet. Flocks of mountain sheep, absolutely unafraid, came down from the higher slopes to eat gifts of salt.

"Windy Camp was our home during all of the second day—there was no scheduled riding, but Harrison Lake, a couple of hours' ride from camp, was reported to be literally bursting with fish. So most of the riders took themselves off to the fishing ground and returned, let it be said in all fairness, with more than one good catch.

"There was more than a little excitement as we herded into Scotch Cabin out of the rain. Ahead of us lay a crossing of the Red Deer, by far the largest stream we would have to cross on the ride. We hadn't long to wait. Pretty soon we were under way again, winding out from the cabin up the trail to a point where the Red Deer was broken in mid-stream by an island of gravel and stone on which a few broken trees thrust up dead branches. We were to take the jump in two instalments. Crossing diagonally from the left bank to the miniature island, walking down to the foot of the island—possibly 150 feet, and then crossing to the right bank through a deeper stretch of water.

"Exciting enough while it lasted, the ford was made without incident. Wranglers and guides, their horses plunging and splashing in the icy stream, lined the crossing. Should a horse stumble, there was a strong hand ready to catch the bridle; did he get too far down stream near the deeper water, he was herded back to the safety of the shallow ford.

"Camp No. 2, like Windy Camp, had its waterfall, its deep woods and abundant fresh water as well as good grazing for the horses. But the route to it, through the Red Deer Valley, known by the Indians once as their greatest hunting ground in the Rockies, offered new delights in more ways than once. Game looked to be more plentiful; it was higher, and glimpses of the mountains, such as the Bare Mountains, Snow Creek Pass, Mount Prow, Mount Tyrrell and Mount McConnell, were more frequent. The camp was in the larch country, near the timber line; teepee poles were shorter and firewood just a little more difficult to beg from the hard-worked guides.

"The fourth day's ride, however, opened up new vistas as the trail wound through larch groves getting all the time smaller until the timberline was reached and past, alpine meadows, glaciers and other features of high country taking the place of the wooded country.

"As we passed by Mount Drummond, Cyclone Mountain, Mount Douglas, Mount McBride and Mount Skoki where the famous ski camp hides itself, we were high above the earth, and as far as human eye could see stretched endless miles of rugged grandeur. We passed through fresh snow here and there; glaciers were not only above us but below us too, and the air had a different feeling than that of the lower reaches; it was not only chillier but stiller.

"Our route lay through alpine meadows and climbed steadily toward Baker Lake at the foot of which, on a mighty cliff overlooking a wide, deep canyon which stretched off toward the Douglasses, lay as pretty a campsite as ever heartened a weary cavalcade.

"Whatever we had seen before on our riding through this wonderland of the Canadian Rockies began to seem a little inconsequently as we rode up the slopes past Baker Lake with the strange configuration of Fossil Mountain laying to our right.

"Baker Lake, which had yielded rainbow trout to advance members of our cavalcade, lay just below Ptarmigan Lake from which the district takes its name.

"We were nearly 9,000 feet above sea-level, glaciers above and below us: snow-capped peaks stretched in all directions. All morning we rode through this high valley, skirting Baker and Ptarmigan Lakes and wishing we had brought that fishing rod.

"Tilted Mountain, Anthozoan Mountain and Redoubt Mountain were conspicuous Landmarks.

"Now we were on the crest. Behind us lay the Ptarmigan Valley with the Douglasses looming high beyond our previous campsite. Out ahead of us stretched the view toward which we rode for part of that last glorious afternoon.

"Mount Victoria with its famous glacier so well known to those who have seen Lake Louise, whose emerald waters it provides; Mount Temple and Mount Hungabee, of the same notable group, lifted their mighty snow-crowned heads into a sky dotted with lacy clouds. And off to the left were plainly visible the ten great peaks which make up the outer guardians of the Valley of the Ten Peaks where nestles Moraine Lake.

"Toward this spectacular view we rode most of the afternoon until we dropped suddenly into deep timber, winding through it until we came out across the Bow River at the foot of Lake Louise Station."

SPARKS FROM A TRAIL RIDE CAMPFIRE

by Dan. McCOWAN, F.Z.S.

Observations (mostly whimsical), on Sundry Mammals Resident in the Rockies of Canada.

It was singularly appropriate that in the Rocky Mountains town of Banff the streets should have been named for animals native to the region. The summer visitor is charmed with a cottage on the corner of Moose and Squirrel streets. He is amused that Muskrat street gives easy access to the river and that Buffalo street offers a short cut to the meat market. As the town develops I am hopeful of yet seeing a Porcupine Plaza, a Chipmunk Crescent and a Badger Boulevard added to the list.

This old established National Park, in which Banff is so fortunately situated, has an extremely large and varied animal population, so varied in fact one marvels that no mountain in the neighbourhood has been named Ararat. Were it possible to stage a two-by-two parade of these mammals the spectacle would be indeed imposing with no fewer than four score individuals in the procession. Many of these creatures live along the route of the 1942 Trail Ride and it is possible that in July as you ride up the valley of Cascade River, camp on the outskirts of Drummond Glacier or wander afoot by the shores of Ptarmigan Lake, there may be opportunity to study, perhaps to photograph, a deer, a bear or a cony. In a single issue of this bulletin it is not possible to describe in detail each species of animal you may see on the forthcoming ride. A thumb nail biography of some outstanding types native to the region may however prove of interest to prospective riders and to readers who treasure the memory of former brave days on upland trails, who recall the comradeship of the camp fire, who yearn for the song of wind in the tamaracks, for the pungent odour of wood smoke, for the starlit silence of the distant hills and for a 2500 mile button.

At the outset I might state that from a zoological angle the subsequent notes on quadrupeds of the Rockies are practically useless. To a potential trail rider they may prove diverting, so, if you are, so to speak, still in the saddle, read on.

THE ELK, alias WAPITI.

A large able-bodied and arrogant deer. The males are popularly believed to bugle cheerfully through the forest glades in autumn. Musically, the performance is a bit off key,—like the swan song of a stuck pig. The females then look as if about to become hysterical. In the juvenile stage the coat of an elk is dappled with dark spots somewhat resembling the pips on the ten of spades. The animals eat freely of Indian Hellebore, a plant poisonous even to a pack-horse. Useful in filling a short gap in a crossword puzzle. Also in furnishing teeth for the ornamentation of watch fobs.

THE CANADA MOOSE.

Another massive kind of deer related to the now defunct Elk of Eire. Resembles a horse on stilts and is a strict vegetarian. The bulls grow large flat deciduous antlers used chiefly for decorating the gable ends of summer cottages. In late fall rival males make weird sounds somewhat like a New Brunswick guide mooing through a birch bark megaphone. Has for long been patron saint or mascot to a fraternal brotherhood. Should not be confused with that "timorous cowering beastie", the moose of Scotland.

BIG HORN SHEEP.

The Chamois of the Canadian Rockies. Has no wool and consequently is not molested by Red Cross workers, Hudson's Bay Co. etc. Indians of the Assiniboine tribe fashioned ladles and spoons from the massive horns and soup from other parts of the anatomy. Is believed to have originated in Asia where its ancestors were first described by that peerless trail rider, Marco Polo. Greatly plagued by woodticks and photographers. Economic status,—Providing life models for Carl Rungius.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS GOAT.

Trail riders seldom see this animal save by the aid of a powerful telescope which is perhaps a good thing for all concerned. Ordinary binoculars wobble so much at high altitudes that it is difficult to distinguish between a minute goat and a spacious snow patch. Claude Brewsters right forefinger has been worn to the quick from pointing out pin-point goats to myopic dudes on mountain trails. This animal is not a true goat. It chews the cud but eschews tin cans, bed sheets and newspapers as articles of diet. The pastern is very short, if you know what I mean. Also the temper, and a wild goat in a tantrum is not to be trifled with. Why the males should all be called Billy and the females Nanny is one of the unsolved mysteries of science. In parts of the Alps large quantities of cheese are made from goat's milk but, so far, attempts to domesticate the white goats of the Rockies have been discouraging.

THE HOARY MARMOT.

Grand Uncle to the Groundhog. Often seen sitting on the lee side of a large boulder playing the penny whistle, hence the name Siffleur. Fond of wild celery, button mushrooms, Alpine scenery and icewater. Hibernates on the least provocation. Being the only quadruped in North America furnished with thumb nails it is allergic to sun dogs and avalanches. The fur coat is a bit shoddy, the flesh almost as esculent as that of the Great Horned Owl. Thus the marmot is permitted to mind his own business and to live to a ripe old age.

THE PIKA or CONY.

If, when skirting a rock slide, you see an animal masquerading as a Guinea Pig in a Chinchilla fur coat, be assured that it is a Pika. Someone will likely tell you that it is a Rock Rabbit but it is really a Hare. The family motto or slogan of this thrifty clan is "Make Hay while the Sun Shines". Refusing steadfastly to hibernate in winter the creatures are a distinct menace to people who have become addicted to ski-ing. A thoughtless Pika strolling about could easily clutter up an otherwise brilliantly executed slalom or some such caper. At the close of a summer day these blithesome mountaineers may be seen listening to the news or heard calling cheerfully to each other, the sound being clearly audible at a distance of three feet. Pikas moult twice annually.

THE BLACK BEAR.

A confirmed camp follower possessed of unlimited capacity for food. Fond of peanut brittle, ants and all sorts of miscellaneous trash. Favourite pastime,—Spearing salmon, disorganizing a Pack Train or overturning bee hives. Black Bears range in weight from one half pound to three hundred pounds, depending on age and size. Some individuals are clad in coat of cinnamon brown which gives variety to Kodachrome pictures of the Rockies and Selkirks. Is very short sighted but has never been known to attack a person armed with an umbrella. Highly emotional when given a wrong number and weeps copiously when listening to a soft soap drama. Sense of smell very keen. One berry-bearing shrub, two constellations and approximately four hundred and seventeen creeks have been named for this animal.

THE RED SQUIRREL.

Gossip columnist of the Greenwoods Gazette. A persistent eavesdropper, seldom without a flea in his ear. Strange to say is not related to the ferret and has never been known to go gathering nuts in May.

THE PORCUPINE.

This animal is streamlined like a taxi-cab and moves intermittently at the rate of about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles per hour. Being extremely fond of any salty substance it may thus be discovered wandering about the woods in search of a few pretzels or a copy of Esquire. Some years ago the late William Shakespeare described the animal as "fretful". Since then I have heard Bill Potts speak of the whole tribe in language quite un-poetical. Has orange coloured teeth and is a confirmed flag-pole sitter. Theme song,—Give me a Boot or Saddle". Hint to prospective trail riders—Should an adult porcupine invade your tipi in the night notify the nearest A.R.P. worker or call the janitor immediately.

RIDING TO STARDOM

Doris Simpson becomes Beth Drake

On our Trail Ride to Mount Assiniboine last Summer, we had a rider from Chicago whose graceful figure, lovely face, happy smile, good nature and good companionship made her one of the most acceptable members of our party. Doris Simpson was on her way to try her luck in Hollywood, and her fellow Trail Riders will be glad to know that she landed a contract with Warner Brothers. The Chicago newspapers announced that she was being filmed for a new musical called "Here Come the Girls". Your Secretary-Treasurer wrote to Hollywood and received in reply a charming letter from which the following are extracts:

"As for me and my new career, I have just finished a small role in 'Yankee Doodle Dandy' which was a song and dance in the 'Sextet'. The story is the life of George M. Cohan, and is a fine unusual comedy — soon to be released. My next assignment has not yet (December 14th) been given as yet, but no doubt you will read of my progress.

"I did enjoy seeing the booklet about the Trail Ride. It certainly brought back pleasant memories. I shall never forget the heavenly month I spent in Canada and will always have a place in my heart for it."

The name under which Doris Simpson will appear in the films is Beth Drake. Here's the best of luck to her!

WEDDING BELLS

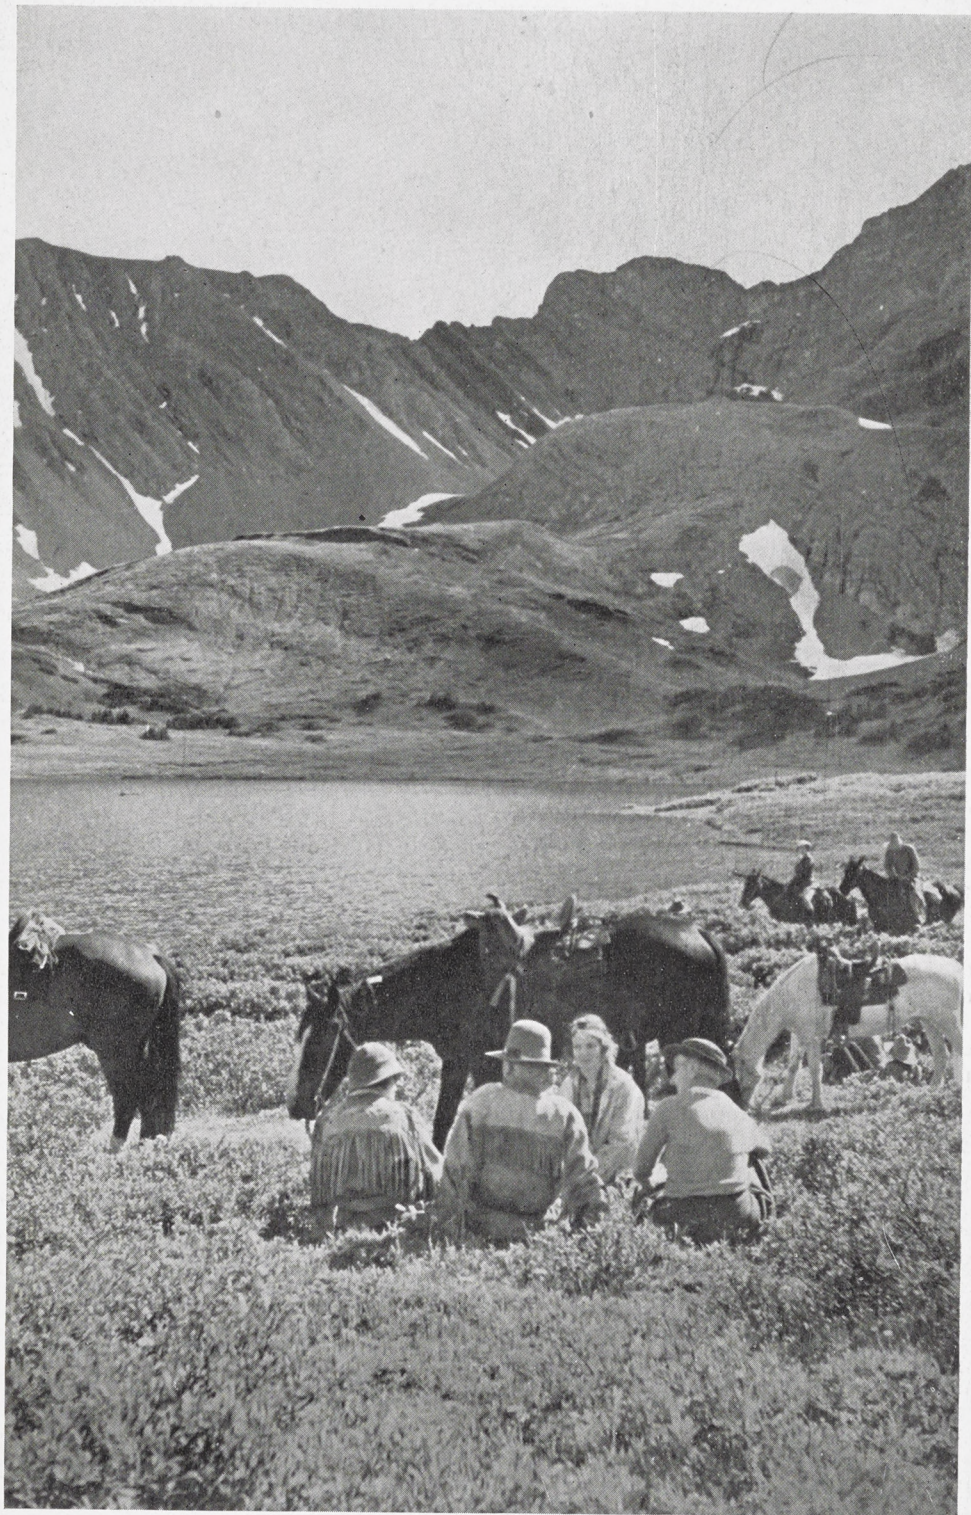

Several of our Trail Rider members are reported to have entered the corral of matrimony in their recent months — Margaret Ecker is now Mrs. Robert Francis. Aileen Bettesworth of Quebec is now Mrs. A. Bettesworth Grassby of Levack, Ontario. Edmee Moore remains in Banff as Mrs. Charles Reid. By the way George Vaux also became a benedict just about the time of last year's Trail Ride. Best wishes to all!

ETCHING OF MOUNT ASSINIBOINE

The autographed etching of Mount Assiniboine by R. H. Palenske, which he kindly offered at the nominal price of $5.00 to our members in good standing, the proceeds to go into the general funds of the Trail Riders, has resulted in a gratifying response. There are, however, still a few copies available, so that any members who overlooked this opportunity are reminded that it still exists, though not for long.

TRAIL RIDE PHOTOS

Quite a number of prints of snapshots taken on the 1941 Trail Ride have been entered for the Reginald Townsend Silver Cup. One Trail Rider has asked that the date be extended to February 15th, and in order to be fair to all, the date of entry will be correspondingly extended to all.
